

Local Theater Comes Alive at the Library

By Amy Howlett, Library Director

Remember the good times you had at the Springfield Community Players? Relive those memories with an exciting new display in the lobby of the Springfield Town Library. Props, memorabilia, and summer season teasers are up in July.

The Springfield Community Players are the oldest continuously performing community theater in Vermont, on stage since 1920. Don Gray, Stephanie Rowe and current president John MacDonald have picked highlights from stage props and scrapbooks to show off a hundred years of area cultural history.

Ready to plan your next local theater outing? The Springfield Community Players are rehearsing Steel Magnolias by Robert Harling right now. Shows are July 20th, 21st, 27th & 28th, starting at 7:30 p.m. All performances happen at the Studio on 165 South Street in Springfield. Find tickets at springfieldcommunityplayers.org or call the Ticket Box Office at 866-967-8167.

The Springfield Town Library is located at 43 Main Street. Programs are free and open to the public
